1.0 PREAMBLE

Scholarship, until recent times, was seen as a trilogy of teaching, research and community service and four functions of scholarship were clearly identified, i.e., discovery, integration, application and dissemination of knowledge. These days, however, entrepreneurship has been added as a core function of world class universities. Scholars are now expected to promote the entrepreneurial spirit in students and the society. Nevertheless, research is central to these activities, in so far as effective teaching is based on research outcome while effective participation in community service and knowledge-oriented business enterprises is also based on research outcomes.

What makes a sound academic depends largely on the extent to which one's colleagues, peer groups and students can read one's contributions, in the form of scholarly publications. The research strength of universities is now measured by citations in bibliometric indices per faculty member, based on the number of articles by faculty members in international journals and edited books by reputable publishers. Rightly or wrongly, all universities are now usually defined not simply within the context of national borders, but on a global level. Global ranking of universities is now based on a mixture of reputation, research output, grants and other qualitative input data to determine the top universities.

The University of Ibadan desires to be a leading research-intensive university; hence, emphasis is placed on discovery, integration, application, and dissemination of knowledge in the promotion of its academic staff. This is in keeping with its Vision and Mission 'to be a world-class institution for academic excellence geared towards meeting societal needs'.

Overall, the university aspires to attain and retain globally acceptable standards of appraisal for our staff.

2.0 OBJECTIVES

To encourage, acknowledge and reward: (i) sound scholarship; (ii) effective and competent teaching; and (iii) professional/administrative competence and technical skills and community service where appropriate.

REGULATIONS FOR PROMOTION OF ACADEMIC STAFF IN THE LIBRARY*1. Preamble

Academic librarianship, which is a combination of professionalism and scholarship, is very strongly service-oriented. By its very nature, its professional/service aspect tends to make disproportionate demand on the time of the practitioner. Moreover, a long period of experience is usually required before maturity can be attained in terms of research and publications. Therefore, in most cases, but particularly up to the Senior Librarians Grade, greater emphasis should be placed on professional competence and experience than on research and publications.

(a) Professional ability and competence will be adjudged on the following:

- (i) Professional practice in an academic or research institution;
- (ii) workload and level of productivity; and
- (iii) nature of responsibility including ability to manage a sub-section of the Library.

(b) Additionally, a Librarian is expected to take keen interest in any activity capable of enhancing library and information science in and outside the University. The elements of contribution include:

- (i) Level of professional practice/responsibility in an academic or a research library;
- (ii) Activities in professional association;
- (iii) Contribution to the professional literature, and body of knowledge or practice.

2. Research

The Librarian in a University system should also engage in research. This shall include the following:

- (i) On-going research, particularly all studies
- (ii) Thesis and dissertation, subject bibliographies and
- (iii) Policy papers and manuals.
- (iv) Others are:
  - (a) unpublished bibliographies, indexes, guides and book reviews;
  - (b) conference and seminar papers; and
  - (c) abstracts (which have not otherwise been published)

3. Publications

- (i) Articles published in refereed journals
- (ii) Books or chapters in books (which should be relevant to the discipline of the candidate);
- (iii) Accepted articles or manuscripts for books may be used for promotion to all grades but these would be only on strict verification by the Library Promotions Panel;
- (iv) Published conference papers;
- (v) Bibliographies, indexes and guides.

4. Experience

As applicable to equivalent positions in academic departments

5. Assessment Criteria

In every case, particularly up to the Senior Librarian Grade, a high rating in professional ability and experience shall compensate for deficiency in research and publications.

6. Criteria for Appointments and Promotions

The same set of criteria shall be used for both appointments and promotions.

1 7. Promotion Criteria for Academic Staff of the Library

2
3 (a) Upgrading of Assistant Librarian to Librarian II

- 4 (i) An Assistant Librarian on completion of higher degree in Librarianship may

8
9 (b) Promotion from Librarian II to the Grade of Librarian I
